TRAVIS CARPENTER

Research Fellow

Health & Social Policy

Dr. Travis Carpenter is a Clinician Administrator and physician in General Internal Medicine. His academic and administrative activities have focused on quality improvement and health policy, with extensive experience in policy evaluation, research and advocacy in Ontario, Alberta and Atlantic Canada.

He serves on the Board of Directors for Doctors Nova Scotia and as Chair for the Health Policy Panel at the Ontario Medical Association, having also spent four years as a member and subsequent Chair of the former Health Policy Committee at the OMA. He holds faculty appointments at Dalhousie University (Assistant Professor, Clinician Administrator) and the University of Toronto (Assistant Professor, Clinician in Quality & Innovation). He practices medicine at the QEII Health Sciences Centre in Halifax and at Unity Health Toronto.

He is the current Division Head for General Internal Medicine in Nova Scotia Health Central Zone and has held a variety of quality and leadership roles at the local hospital level.

Originally from Manitoba, he is proud of his prairie roots and is a University of Alberta alumnus, where he attained his medical degree. He completed medical residency and fellowship at the University of Toronto, thereafter completing his graduate degree in public health at the Harvard Chan School.
