

Jessica Brandon-Jepp

Senior Director, Fiscal and Financial Services Policy Canadian Chamber of Commerce

In her role as Senior Director, Fiscal and Financial Services Policy at the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, Jessica Brandon-Jepp capitalizes on a decade of experience driving public policy solutions which enable businesses and our economy to thrive. Jessica leads the economic, tax and fiscal files on behalf of the Chamber's large and diverse membership of Canadian businesses. Prior to joining the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, Jessica advised some of North America's largest and most prominent organizations on their public affairs strategy. She has also managed government relations on behalf of some of Canada's largest cooperative financial institutions, reducing their exposure to political, regulatory, and reputational risk. Throughout her career, Jessica has launched effective advocacy campaigns across party lines, including forming and managing an all-party parliamentary caucus. Jessica has appeared as a witness before several parliamentary committees and has a proven track record delivering high-stakes public policy and regulatory successes for businesses and associations. She holds an undergraduate degree from the University of Guelph, is a graduate of the Government Relations Management program at Seneca College, and holds a Masters in Political Management from Carleton University.
